The success of the symposium was the result of the collaboration and assistance of people and institutions involved in emergency situations, sharing their experience and expertise not only in the field of museums, but also in the humanitarian and security sector.

This intercultural team produced significant work, thanks to the generous hospitality and professional leadership of the host institution, the Salar Jung Museum, and its staff, especially Dr. A.K.V.S. Reddy (Director), Dr. A.N. Reddy (Joint director), Sri. G.S. Kusum (Keeper) and Sri. M. Veerender (Deputy Keeper). The participants were able to improve their understanding and implement essential drills and procedures for the elaboration of an emergency plan, based on a mock exercise led by Dr. A.V.S. Reddy (IAS, Secretary of the department of Tribal Welfare), Sri. P. Krishna Reddy (IPS, Director) and Mr. G. Pandley (NISA, Deputy commandant). The Government of India through the Secretary of Culture, the State Government of Andhra Pradesh (State Tourism Corporation), the Secretariat of ICOM Regional Organisation for Asia and the Pacific and the Sustainable Heritage Development Programme in the Research School of Pacific and Asian Studies at the Australian National University, both managed by Dr. Amareswar Galla, lent their support to the conference from the outset.

Pavel Jirásek (Chairperson, ICOM International Committee for Museum Security), Jørgen Wadum (Chairperson, ICOM International Committee for Conservation) and Patrick Boylan (Chairperson, ICOM International Committee for the Training of Personnel) made an invaluable contribution to the development of the programme. Luis Repetto (Chairperson, ICOM Regional Organisation for Latin America and the Caribbean) and ICOM-Venezuela also played a vital role during the case study mission in Caracas, which strengthened the role of museums and disaster situations in this geographic area.

Frédérique Vincent (representing ICOM International Committee for Conservation) in partnership with ICOM-Madagascar provided extremely useful technical support in assessing current disaster situations with regard to cultural property.

Saskia Brown (Editorial Assistance, Communication Unit) provided editorial guidelines for the publication of the proceedings, which were proof-read by Caroline Taylor-Bouché (Interim Editor, Publications Unit).

Special thanks go to Isabelle Brianso (Interim Project Assistant, Programme Activities Unit) for her invaluable help and heartfelt commitment and to Elisabeth Jani (Documentalist, Documentation Centre) whose accurate editing and professionalism was a priceless asset to this publication.
